Subject: RE: Splits procedure

Hi Everyone-

I will state that this issue has become very hostile and distracting. I will confirm the bins in the lab were removed after the lab had been cleaned out. I could not find them anywhere and assumed they'd be found eventually. As far as the balance QC is concerned I can't speak to that because I was not involved.

Thank You,

He did find the Balance QC and he insisted it was where He put it all the time. Not true, Zach found it after days of looking for it and Zach put it there, he is lying to make me look bad and Zach & Meg should confirm this.

This is an EXTREMELY HOSTILE Environment and I do not need to be subjected to this by a new supervisor after 28 years of dedicated service and supervision of three highly important labs.

He is here arguing with me now and I DO NOT NEED this STRESS! He is insisting that the bins were not removed and would not come ask Meg & Zach as they say they were gone during the cleaning so I had to bring them into the lab myself and they said they have not seen the bins since the lab was cleaned. I do not need harassing me. The people in the lab are having trouble doing the work and finding our lab equipment.

Thanks

Russ

Garry—can you please go into the dairy lab and spend a few minutes with Russ to find the things he needs and show him some of the rest of the items you have found new homes for?

Thanks,

Tracy

I understand but it is creating havoc in the Lab and pulling me away from things I need to be doing, now we are looking for the laminated card with the Dairy codes on them for the media room. So now we have to search and this goes on. And you wonder why I may forget something here or there as I have to keep trying to remember what was here and what is missing and where it might be. Then if I forget something we have a big meeting in Dr. Hans office and send out emails to all these people.

Thanks,

Russ

Russ, I have no idea. I suggest a face-face conversation with Garry and Ayman about what they did with everything. Garry's intentions were good—I don't think he would have just gotten rid of things without checking with you. He should probably just go into the lab with you and show you what's what.

Now I can't find out sample bins, we had 5 of them and only one remains in the lab. We received a large load and need the other bins to put all the samples in.

Thanks,
Russ

I have never seen it. So your hands on experience is what needs to be written down. Garry and I can help with the writing if you can tell us what you do.

Because if there isn't one I am going to ask you to write it. There should be a written procedure for everything you do in the lab and I've never seen one. And if there is one Garry and I should read and sign it like we do in all of the other labs.

Hi Russ,

Do you have a written procedure for preparation of splits, and a list of labs you send them to?

Thanks,
Tracy
